

EVANGELOS MYTILINEOS AT CNN

Evangelos Mytilineos, President and CEO of MYTILINEOS Group, spoke live yesterday night on CNN International. The show presenter, John Defterios, asked for the President's views on the political developments, the Greek sovereign debt haircut and the possibilities the country has to recover from the current recession.

Mr. Mytilineos stressed that the business community sees positively the decision of the two main parties to cooperate, as businesses wish for a coalition government that will bring stability to the country and the market. He commented on the haircut, clarifying that it is a decision that mainly affects the financial institutions that will need recapitalization, expected to contribute in getting out of the liquidity trap and hopefully bring investment capital back.

He closed his statement with a positive note, highlighting that as a Group we believe in the country's capabilities and in the competitive advantages it has, due to its geographical position, and that what needs to be done is everyone, politicians, businessmen and citizens, to get their act together and work hard.

Click on the image to watch the interview